

The dry dock at Bradford Grand Bahama

Mr. & Mrs. Cosman, owners of Bradford Marine, christened the dry dock.

In the mid-1990s Bradford's management realized it would have to upgrade its facilities to accommodate the luxury yacht industry's mushrooming megayacht fleet. In order to maintain its reputation as the premier yacht refit and repair company, Bradford took the bold step of opening a new satellite facility in the Bahamas.

The land for the new Bradford facility in Freeport, Grand Bahama, was acquired in 1997 and Bradford Grand Bahama, Ltd., is now up and running. Employing 90 tradesmen, the deep-water yard offers all the services that can be found at Fort Lauderdale and uses a 1,200-ton floating dry dock to haul vessels up to 230 feet. For smaller projects the yard has a 150-ton TraveLift. The company also plans to develop 20 acres of its land to build individual megayacht shelters to accommodate yachts to 420 feet in length. It will include working and storage space as well as overnight crew accommodations. Inquiries are invited.
